Paper/Pencil	Journaling	You are living through a very historic event which you will someday surely want to tell your children and grandchildren about. Consider creating a journal during your time off. Write a little bit each day from when you first heard about the coronavirus until the end of this experience. Things to consider writing about: what you heard, peer reactions, your thoughts and emotions, what you are observing, and how this is impacting kids, parents, and people in

		your local community or the world at large. Include interesting details such as how grocery shopping changed, what you and your family did when you were home from school, how you kept in touch with friends, etc. Practice empathy by putting yourself in the shoes of those who are directly affected by this virus such as the elderly, those who are ill, the leaders who are being called upon to make important decisions about this crisis, and the doctors and health professionals who are on the front lines. You can choose to share your journal or keep it private. Developing empathy will help us better understand any historical event.
Paper/Pencil	Family members	Research your family culture / heritage / family background / ancestry
